 Esdaile 8, Wood III. 53, BMC 28, Harris 3.
 First edition (second issue, variety b) of the first English translation, by James Mabbe, of this famous picaresque novel. The first Spanish edition appeared in 1599. Mr. Esdaile describes (erroneously) the issues of 1622 and 1623 as separate editions; they are both made up of the same sheets: in the correct differentiation is

- (1) First issue, with title dated 1622
- (2) Second issue, exactly the same setting except the last cipher of the date, where a "3" is substituted for the "2." Of the second issue there are two varieties (a) with a headline, De epistola, on * 2 b (b) without it.

This copy is taller than that in the British Museum, measuring in height 185 mm—the B.M. copy measures 174 mm. James Mabbe (1572-1642?) Spanish scholar, born in Surrey, matriculated at Magdalen College, Oxford: adopted the pseudonym of "Don Diego Puede-Ser" (James May-be), translated Celestina and the Exemplary novels of Cervantes.

AMERICA.

5 Gage (Thomas) A NEW SURVEY OF THE WEST INDIES: or, the English American his travel by sea and land . . . wherein is set forth his voyage from Spain to S. John de Ulhua and thence . . . to Mexico. Likewise his journey from Mexico through the provinces of Guaxaca, Chiapa, Guatemala, Vera Paz, Truxillo, Comayagua . . . especially in the Indian towns of Mixco, Pinola, Potapa. As also . . . his return through the provinces of Nicaragua and Costa Rica to Nicoya, Panama, Portobello, Cartagena and Havana. . . With a Grammar, or some few rudiments of the Indian tongue, called Poconchi or Pocoman. 8vo, with folding map of the West Indies, original calf. £4 10 0

A. Clark: London 1677

 An important account of Spanish dominion in the West Indies. It told from personal experience much that had been jealously excluded from foreigners by the authorities, and Gage's account of the wealth and defenceless condition of the Spanish possessions first gave Englishmen (in 1648) a desire for mastery over the West Indies. The author died at Jamaica while acting as chaplain to the Venables' expedition of 1654-6.

6 Gallaway (Joseph) A REPLY to the Observations of Lieu.-Gen. Sir William Howe, on a pamphlet entitled Letters to a Nobleman, in which his misrepresentations are detected, and those Letters are supported by a variety of new matter and argument. 8vo, presentation copy with autograph inscription "For Thomas De Grey, Esq., from his most humble servt. The Author," wrapper. £7 0 0

G. Wilkie: London 1780

 The Author was Speaker of the Assembly of Pennsylvania, and was examined before the House of Commons in 1780.

7 Franklin (Benjamin, Printer) CICERO (Marcus Tullius) CATO MAJOR: or his discourse of old age: with explanatory notes. Sm. 4to, 8 pp., 159 pp., title in red and black, a few leaves very slightly discoloured in top margin, old sheep, ENTIRELY UNCUT, VERY RARE IN THIS STATE. £95 0 0

Benjamin Franklin: Philadelphia 1744

 Sabin 13040; Evans 5361; Pennypacker 55; Stevens, Nuggets, 551. Both Sabin and Evans speak of the rarity of uncut copies of this book; Sabin says: "Uncut copies are among the rarest of books, I know but four copies." This book is usually considered as the best specimen of printing produced by Franklin. The translation was made by Judge James Logan. Franklin's claim that this is the first translation of a classic in the western world is not correct. Sandys translated Ovid in Virginia about ninety years earlier, and Franklin himself had published a translation of Cato's Moral Distichs (also attributed to Logan) in 1739 [Sabin 11548], and a translation of Epictetus was published at Philadelphia by S. Keimer in 1729 [Sabin 22682].

8 Harper (Robert Goodloe) OBSERVATIONS OF THE DISPUTE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND FRANCE. 8vo, sewn. £1 5 0

Philadelphia printed. London reprinted...and sold...by...all booksellers, except John Stockdale: Piccadilly 1798

 Stockdale had published an unauthorized edition. The author was Representative in Congress for South Carolina and the Observations were addressed to his constituents. Autograph on title of Wm. Burgh, the Irish M.P. (1741-1808).

AMERICA—continued.

9 [Ward (Nathaniel)] THE SIMPLE COBLER OF AGGAWAM in America: willing to help mend his native country, lamentably tattered, both in the upper leather and sole, with all the honest stitches he can take. The third edition, with some additions. Sm. 4to, 2 ll., 80 pp., modern calf roxburghe. £7 0 0.

J. D. and R. I. for Stephen Bowtell: London 1647

* Lowndes, p. 484. Thomason has recorded on his copy of this tract that it was written by Nathaniel Ward, pastor of Aggawam, or Ipswich, Massachusetts, during his stay in America. Four editions were published in 1647. (Thomason Tracts Catalogue, I. p. 490, Allibone, p. 2575).

Roger Daniel: Cambridge 1641

 On a fly leaf, in an old hand, is the signature "Is. Walton," which may be in the hand of "the complete angler." In any case Thomas Gosden was convinced, for when this book passed through his hands, he impressed his emblematic tools of baskets and fish on the back, and on the upper cover he lettered: "Izz. Walton's copy." It is a most interesting association volume and is the first old book which we have seen tooled by the famous Gosden.

18 Mackintosh (Alexander) The Driffeld Angler; in two parts: containing Descriptions of the different kinds of Fresh Water Fish, and the best methods of taking them in rivers, lakes, and fish-ponds; with full directions for Baits, and the manner of making Artificial Flies for every month of the season. To which are added, Instructions for Shooting: With rules for the breeding, breaking, and management of Pointers and Spaniels; and the choice of Guns for Game and Wild Fowl. For W. Mears, etc.: London 1724

 Westwood & Satchell, p. 189. "Saunders is the first angling author who mentions silk-worm gut" (pp. 91-2).

20 Whitney (John) THE GENTEEL RECREATION, or the Pleasure of Angling. 16mo, boards. £2 10 0 [Without Printer]: London 1700

Reprinted by J. H. Burn: London 1820

 Preface: "The extreme rarity of this work, probably owing to its having been printed for the author, is such that the publisher does not remember to have met with any other copy in any sale catalogue than that described in Messrs. Longman's Bibliotheca Anglo-Poetica." Westwood and Satchell, p. 240. "One hundred copies were taken of the reprint. . . . John Whitney's vocation seems to have been to chant, with sackbut, psaltry, dulcimer, and all kinds of music, the praises of John Hyde, Esq., and his great fish pond at Heaven, with his waterworks, and his summer-house, and everything that was his. His rhymes are in the Bombastes Furioso style, and was sufficiently ridiculous to be somewhat amusing."

21 Williamson (John, Gent.) THE BRITISH ANGLER: or Pocket Companion for Gentlemen-Fishers. Small 8vo, frontispiece by BICKHAM, and three plates by BLOTE and COLE. Some leaves are slightly stained, but a fine copy, in half crushed olive morocco, fishes and baskets impressed in gilt on back, t.e.g. £2 0 0

22 Williamson (Captain T.) THE COMPLETE ANGLER'S VADE-MECUM; being a perfect code of instruction on the above pleasing science; wherein are detailed, a great variety of original practices and inventions; together all that can contribute to the sportsman's amusement and success. 8vo. Ten etched plates of fish, hooks, tackle, etc. Original boards, paper back, edges of leaves uncut. £1 5 0

Payne and Mackinlay [etc.]: London 1808

 The author says: "I have not servilely copied from any man; but when my experience has justified a concurrence with the practices of others, I have adopted them, and now, by insertion in this volume, give them all due praise." This assertion is borne out by the general character of the work, which is essentially original." —Westwood & Satchell (pp. 241-2).

23 ANTHROPOLOGY. UVAROV (Sergyei Semenovich, Count). ESSAY ON THE MYSTERIES OF ELEUSIS; by M. Ouvaroff. Translated from the French by J. D. Price. With observations by J. MAGNIFICENT LARGE COPY OF THIS RARE AND IMPORTANT BOOK. £45 0 0 Paganinus de Paganinis: Venetiis 1509

* Essling 1645 who mentions 89 separate cuts at the end. This is however a mistake and 87 is the correct number. It is exceedingly difficult to find this book in good condition, the marginal cuts being generally cut into. The plates include a complete alphabet geometrically designed. Graesse, vol. I., p. 496, styles this book a "rare volume." Cicognara, No. 341, states, on the authority of Vasari, vol. 4, p. 13 (Florentine edition), that the real author is Pietro degli Franceschi and that Luca Pacioli is a plagiarist. This assertion is, however, effectually disposed of by Harzen, in Weigel's Archiv f. d. zeichn. Künste, 1886, vol. II. 233-244.

- 34 Paciolo Dal Borgo (Luca) DIVINA PROPORTIONE. Die Lehre vom goldenen Schnitt. Nach der Venezianischen Ausgabe vom Jahre 1509, neu herausgegeben übersetzt und erläutert von CONSTANTIN WINTERBERG. 8vo, original wrapper, uncut and unopened. £1 2 6

For W. Clarke: London 1823

 Allibone, p. 153. D.N.B., col. II, p. 84. Probably the greatest of all English oriental stories; and one which Lord Bryon terms "this most eastern and sublime tale," the D.N.B. refers to it as a "masterpiece" which "combines two things most difficult to alliance—the fantastic and the sublime." The "London Quarterly Review" speaks of his "dazzling genius," but reprehends the "audacious licentiousness," "diabolical levity," and "cool cynicism," also characteristic of the author. Not in English Catalogue 1801-1836.

The bindings are in faultless condition. £58 10 0

Vincentius Accoltus: Rome 1574

*. Apart from the splendid state of the bindings the book has an interesting provenance, for one Hoym's death they passed into the hands of Jean Baptiste Colbert, and contain the inscription "Bibliothecæ Colbertinæ" on each title-page. Subsequently the book was sold at the Bentick sale in 1815, and, later, in the Heber sale in 1834.

Morocco bindings, with the arms of Count von Hoym, are among the most treasured books bound at this period. Hoym employed three of the famous binders of his time: Boyet, Du Seuil, and Padeloup. It is usually presumed that Boyet did most of the work, and it is very probable that the two present volumes were bound by him.

The British Museum dates this work [1564], but there is no doubt that 1568 is the earliest possible date, as one of the poems in this volume bears that date. Some poems are addressed to Cath. de' Medici, Queen Elizabeth, Mary, Queen of Scots, etc.

Jacob Böhme, Böhm, or Behmen (1575-1624), a celebrated German mystic; born near Görlitz in Upper Lusatia; served as an apprentice to a shoe-maker, and followed that trade at Görlitz; a devout reader of the Bible from his youth, and member of the Lutheran Church, which he probably never forsook. According to his own statement he was divinely illuminated, and this enabled him to perceive the mysteries of nature and grace; he wrote this book, which Hallam says was not published until 1641. About 1610 he was generally accounted a visionary by the clergy, but his opinions were adopted by many in Germany, Holland and England. Among his admirers and disciples were many men of high rank and cultivation. "His supernatural illumination," says Hallam, "came without the gift of transferring the light to others, for scarce any have been able to pierce the clouds in which his meaning has been charitably supposed to lie hid. (Thomas: The universal dictionary of biography, vol. I., p. 380.) John Sparrow (1615-1665?) mystic; of the Inner Temple.

For Henry Herringman [London] 1668

 Collation: 1 leaf, A—M^s N⁴, frontispiece. This copy lacks N⁴, a blank leaf.
N1b-N3b: "Some books printed for Henry Herringman." The first edition appeared in 1651 or 1652 (Lowndes, p. 422). Other editions, 1653, 1658 (Robert Watt; Bibliotheca Britannica, col. 216g.) 1659. "Ephesian matron" only (Arundell Esdaile: A list of English tales, p. 184). Part II. has a separate title-page: "The Cimmerian matron, to which is added, the Mysteries and miracles of love. By P.M., Gent." The story known as the "Ephesian Matron" is supposed to have been one of the lost Milesian Tales. The earliest extant version is to be found in the Satiricon of Petronius, chapters 111 and 112. It is, perhaps, one of the most widely diffused stories in the history of fiction: after Petronius we find it in the "Seven wise masters," in the fabliau, De la femme qui se fit putain sur la fosse de son mari, in the Cento novelle antiche, (No. 56), in Sercambi (November 16), Annibale Compeggi, and Eustazio Manfredi, in St. Evremond's Oeuvres meslées, Brinon's Tragicomedy, in "The widow's tears," La Fontaine, Voltaire's Zadig (ch. 2.), John of Salisbury's De nugis curialium, and lastly was made the subject of an opera, by Isaac Bickerstaffe in the eighteenth century, (Eduard Griesbach: Die Wanderung der Novelle von der treulosen wittwe durch die Weltliteratur; John Colin Dunlop: History of prose fiction, 1888, vol. 1, pp. 94-96), it is also said to have been common all over China (De Halde: General history of China, 1736, vol. 3, pp. 134-155). The outline of the story is as follows: A lady of Ephesus, on the death of her husband, not contented with the usual demonstrations of grief, descended with the corpse into the vault in which it was interred, resolving to perish there with sorrow. But at length a common soldier who had been appointed to watch the bodies of malefactors crucified in the vicinity, lest they should be taken down by their relations, perceiving a light descended into the vault, and soon persuaded the lady to live. That very night, in her funeral garments, and by the grave of her husband, she proved complaisant to her new and unknown lover. In the meanwhile one of the corpses, which the soldier had been set to guard, had been stolen, and the lady, to save her new swain from punishment, proposed that her husband's corpse should take the place of the criminal's (Dunlop 94-95).

There is a copy of this edition exhibited in the King's Library Exhibition of Printed Books. The catalogue says: "It seems probable that the typographical ideals of the rest of the century were largely influenced by this book." The text is that of the Cambridge edition of 1701.

There are two "points" to be noted in this book.

(1) In a few copies there is a type printed list of "antiquities" on a folding folio sheet inserted at the end of volume I. This sheet is very rare, and is not to be found in any of the three copies in the British Museum. The only other example we have seen is described in our catalogue 859, No. 177.

(2) In some copies the medal of Augustus on p. 108 of volume II. has an error in the inscription, reading "post est" for "potest."

Collation: A-CSD2, Ala, title-page (as above), Alb, blank, A2a-D2b. Text. The author says that if he had entitled his work "Nouveau Système d'Education Publique," nobody would have read it: he is evidently a supporter of educational reform, and the relegation of the enormous classical commentaries of bygone pedants to the rubbish head. He mentions Rousseau's "Emile," which he characterises as "un livre sublime et inutile."

John Elsum (fl. 1700-1705), wrote on painting 1703-1704 (Dictionary of National Biography, Epitome, p. 401). Some of the epigrams are translated from Michael Silos's "De Romana pictura et sculptura." The book has frequently been attributed to John Evelyn. (Lowndes, p. 735, S. Austin Allibone: A critical dictionary of English literature, Vol. I., p. 556, D.N.B., thin paper edition, Vol. VI., p. 754).

 Books from the library of John Evelyn are now very rare. This example shows the trend of Evelyn's reading at the period when he was one of the commissioners for the privy-seal during the time that James II. was granting concessions to his Roman Catholic subjects and threatening the Church of England. Evelyn was a devoted member of the Church of England, and always a stout loyalist, so it is likely that he would need some direction as to his policy concerning Church and King.

 There are two varieties of the first edition, one with the engraved monogram J.E. on title as this copy, and the other identical in all other respects has the same letters in type. It is permissible to suggest that the copies with the engraved monogram were part of a special issue, perhaps only for presentation purposes.

163 Sylva, Or a Discourse of Forest-Trees, and the Propagation of Timber in His Majesties Dominions. By J. E. Esq.; as it was deliver'd in the Royal Society the XVth of October, CIOCLXII. upon Occasion of certain Quaeries propounded to that Illustrious Assembly, by the Honourable the Principal Officers, and Commissioners of the Navy. To which is annexed Pomona: or, An Appendix concerning Fruit-Trees in relation to Cider; the Making and Several ways of Ordering it. Published by the express Order of the Royal Society. Folio (11 $\frac{15}{16}$ by 7 $\frac{7}{16}$ in.), first edition, title-page (with coat of arms) printed in red and black, errata leaf at end, contemporary calf. FINE COPY IN THE ORIGINAL STATE. £19 0 0

J. Martin and J. Allestry: London 1664

 This work was written by the command of the Royal Society. Apprehensions were entertained that the cultivation of large trees was so much neglected, that in a short time it would be difficult, or impossible, to procure sufficient timber for the purposes of the Navy. Evelyn made an earnest appeal to the nation to treat this important subject with due regard. His work was eminently successful. In the new dedication to Charles II., 2nd ed., 1669—five years after the publication of the first edition—Evelyn tells the King, "It has been the sole occasion for furnishing your almost exhausted dominions, with more, I dare say, than two millions of timber trees."

Le Normant for Toubon: Paris [1794]

* VERY RARE. Not in the Bibliothèque Nationale Catalogue. Catherine Théot (or as she preferred to spell it, Théos) was one of Robespierre's mystical protégées. D'Alméras, Les dévotes de Robespierre, p. 302: "Cette brochure [the above], qui est de l'ancienne commissaire de police Chénon, contient le texte de l'interrogatoire que subit Catherine Théot lorsqu'elle fut arrêtée une première fois en 1779."

Mlle. Théot was confined to the Bastille for three years, and at the age of 79 years was accused by the police of claiming to be the mother of God. She was born of humble parents, and at one time was a domestic servant. Later in life she founded a sect of religious fanatics; among her belongings were found instruments that were used by her followers for self discipline. Chénon, who signed the report of her interrogation, was a commissioner of police.

On page 116 ("of a young envoy") we have what is probably an unrecorded allusion to Shakespeare's Henry VIII: "In the midst of the disgraces of fortune and the court, he may chance be sav'd at last and dye repentant, with this saying in Woolsey in his mouth, That had he served God but half as faithfully as he did his prince, he had never come to that." Compare Shakespeare: Henry VIII. (First Folio. Histories, p. 223):—

" O Cromwell, Cromwell,
Had I but served my God with halfe the Zeale
I served my king: he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies."

But as the saying is historical Flecknoe may have derived it from a more immediate source. Not in C. M. Ingleby: Shakespeare's centurie of prayse, second edition, Frederick J. Furnivall: Some 300 fresh allusions to Shakespeare, or Some seventeenth century allusions to Shakespeare and his works not hitherto collected.

Richard Flecknoe (died 1678?), poet; said to have been an Irish priest; printed privately several poems and prose works, including "A relation of ten years' travel in Europe, Asia, Afrique, and America," 1656; his name was used by Dryden for his attack on Shadwell ("MacFlecknoe"), whom the former designates Flecknoe's heir to all his vanities and idiosyncracies. (Dictionary of National Biography, Epitome, p. 444.)

According to Malone, the characters vary in every edition (Lowndes, p. 807; Egerton Brydges: Restituta, vol. 4, p. 437). Characters 55-69 appear to be an addition as the headline of p. 107 (occupied by No. 55) is "Apendex," after the word "Finis" on p. 106. Benoît Prevost: Paris 1560

 Huth Auction Cat., 4694. Not in the British Museum (see below).

Third (or fourth) edition of this famous collection of stories: the first was published in 1558, under the title of Histoire des amans fortunés, it is very imperfect. The second edition of 1559 is the earliest to contain the whole of the 72 tales. This edition was edited by Claude Gruget, formerly one of the Queen's valets de chambre, who collected together all the available manuscripts. The present edition is a reprint of this edition, and is either the third or fourth.

Two editions were issued in 1560, (1) in 16mo, without printer or place; (2) the present. Of (2) there are four issues: (a) the present, having the title within a woodcut border and containing no mention of a publisher; (b) printed for Vincent Sertenas (Graesse IV. 392); (c) for Gilles Robinot (loc. cit.); (d) a different setting of title, without border, imprint mentioning Jean Caveiller as publisher. This is the only issue which the British Museum possesses: press marks 634. R. 12 and George III.'s copy 88. e. 15, which lacks the colophon leaf. This copy is exceptionally tall, measuring 238 millimetres, and having, as stated above, some lower edges rough: of the two Museum copies, 634. R. 12 measures 231 millimetres and 88. e. 15. 216 millimetres.

* With the Heber lot number label pasted on end paper. Collation: A-K8 L4. Rare. Not in George Herbert Palmer. A catalogue of early and rare editions of English poetry, or, Bibliotheca Anglo-Poetica. Benjamin Hawkshaw (d. 1738), divine, B.A., St. John's College, Cambridge, 1691; B.A., Dublin, 1693; M.A., 1695; incumbent of St. Nicholas within the Walls, Dublin; he published the present volume and "The reasonableness of constant communion with the Church of England," 1709. (D.N.B. ix. 232).

In the dedication the author states that these poems "are the essays but of a very young pen in my vacancies from other studies." The Dictionary of National Biography, thin paper edition, vol. 9, p. 232, reads "from Irish studies," but the Huth auction catalogue, p. 1017, No. 3525, as this copy. At pp. 26-27 there is a poem "On the preservation of the library in Dublin College." The second part consists of love poems in the manner of Herrick. There is a poem "On Charles II's restoration," which was evidently written at the time; as the author must have been at least sixteen when he wrote, his birth must have taken place not later than 1644.

Moule Bib. Herald. 194. "From the address to the reader which is dated Mar. 1, 1659/60, it appears the work was written to divert the author's grief upon the death of his relation and best friend, and he proceeds in heraldic terms to display his submission to the dispensations of Providence: 'but since it is the good pleasure of God to charge the Fields of our worldly serenity with Crosses latent and patent which when sanctified, are (by Heavenly Heralds, who can best blazon the entendments of Divine Providence) accounted good bearings, it becomes us to accept his chastisement with submission, and improve his instructions with Christian prudence.'" It is a most interesting and curious work. Anthony à Wood describes it as "rhapsodical, indigested, and whimsical."

The plates show (i) Mr. and Mrs. Hughes on horseback, and (ii) The Menage or Riding House. The woodcut illustrations, which are delightfully crude, show "some of the many Attitudes by which Mr. Hughes and his Assistants prove their amazing Dexterity in Horsemanship." Mr. Hughes, if we may judge by the illustrations, was certainly not lacking in skill, for one of his feats was to stand on his head on a tankard placed on the horse's back, cross his legs, and fire a pistol.

 Very rare. Mrs. Manley (1663-1724), the author of this extraordinary satire on the Whig begetters of the Revolution, was the daughter of Sir Robert Manley, and lived a particularly vivid career of literary politics and intrigue. For publishing this work she, together with her publishers and printer, was arrested on 29 Oct., 1709. Bail was given her on Nov. 5, and she was finally discharged on Feb. 13, 1710. She celebrated her discharge by issuing, in May of the same year, "Memoirs of Europe towards the close of the 8th Century," a work of very similar character, which in fact, is reprinted later as a supplement to the New Atlantis. In June, 1711, she succeeded Swift as editor of the Examiner, and during the following years issued plays, novels, and political pamphlets in close succession. She died in the home of Alderman Barber, the famous printer and Lord Mayor, where she had been living for some years. Vol. I of the above set is of the 2nd edition.

Many contemporary writers have attributed the invention of colour-printing (by super-imposition) to Gautier Dagoty on the evidence of a book which appeared in 1749: Lettres concernant le nouvel art d'imprimer les tableaux avec 4 couleurs. Now, according to his publisher, Le Blon had obtained his privilege nine years earlier. As is usually the case in regard to inventions many people have claimed the discovery, but whether Dagoty, Le Blon or somebody else is to be considered the inventor of the art the fact remains that THESE PLATES ARE AMONG THE EARLIEST ATTEMPTS TO PRODUCE COLOURED ENGRAVINGS.

Ambroise Paré (1509-1590), born at Laval (Mayenne), "the father of French Surgery." He reformed the treatment of gunshot wounds and the method of stopping bleeding in surgical operations, in which cautery had previously been used. Paré substituted in the one case soothing unguents and in the other ligatures. Brantome says that the king sent for Paré who was a protestant, on the eve of the Saint Bartholomew massacre, and kept him in his own room for safety.

The book consists of four essays, the first and second attack the superstition as to the medicinal virtues of mummy and "unicorn's horn," the third deals with poisons and the impossibility of a universal antidote, and the fourth treats of the plague.

The Seigneur des Ursains, to whom this volume is dedicated, after an illness in which Paré had attended him, had enquired why the latter had administered neither mummy or "unicorn's horn." Paré wrote these two essays as an answer. He poured scorn on the notion that any healing virtue could reside in either. "The ancients," he said, "were indeed anxious to embalm the bodies of their dead, but not that they should serve as food and drink for the living as is now done. For they never thought of anything so foolish and abominable." As for the unicorn, Paré points out that the creature is given a different description and character in every traveller's tale. In the introduction he says he had discussed with Chapelain, the recently deceased physician to the king the possibility of abrogating the absurd custom of putting the powdered "horn of the unicorn" in the king's cup as an antidote against poison, but Chapelain replied that the popular fallacy was too ingrained for correction. (D. W. Singer: Ambroise Paré).

Sir Thomas Browne, in his Pseudodoxia Epidemica, book 3, ch. 23, writes at length on the unicorn's horn. He believes in the existence of such an animal, but says that the medicament sold as unicorn's horn is a fraud, and ascribes the credit of exposing it to Thomas Bartholin and Olaus Wormius. However, he is not convinced that this preparation may not have some sort of antidotal property.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica, 12th edition, art. "unicorn," states that the earliest description of the animal is given by Ctesias, who also mentions the antidotal properties of the horn. The belief lingered on in England until the reign of Charles II, when it was finally disposed of by the Royal Society.

A reduced facsimile of the woodcut of the "Camphur" (a supposed species of unicorn) on f 20 b, is to be found in Mr. Francis R. Packard: Life and times of Ambroise Paré, p. 117.

In the treatise on poisons, which is really a continuation of the theme of the previous essay, he refutes the notion of universal antidotes. The treatise on the plague was written with special reference to the outbreak in Paris of 1564, which all but annihilated the population. As Paré had worked in the city during the whole period Catherine de' Medici invited him to record the fruit of his experience. The result was the present tract which appeared in separate form in 1568 and 1580. His claim to the book has been disputed. This is, perhaps, the most important part of the present volume as it contains the first known reference to the discovery at autopsy of metastatic abscesses of the internal organs following wounds.

An anonymous attack on Paré's Discours sur la licorne was issued under the auspices of Grangier, Dean of the Faculty, to which Paré issued this closely reasoned and moderately expressed rejoinder, where he exonerates himself from the charge of blasphemy. 320 NAVY. HODGES (William) RUIN TO RUIN, after misery to misery: being the distressed, and ruined and perishing state of the loyal and faithful SEAMEN of England, and wherein is laid down: I. Their ruined state in several particulars; II. That it is like to be three or four years more before they are paid, except an extraordinary supply be raised and appropriated for them; III. That as many ships, and thousands and ten thousands of men have five or six years pay due, if they are not timely paid, it is like to be eight or nine years between their beginning to earn their money, and their being paid; IV. A proposal humbly offered how they may be paid off all by May next, without borrowing one penny of money; V. Several reasons for their being justly and honestly paid; VI. An humble proposal for the advantage of a million or two in a year to the nation in a few years, and, lastly, an humble supplication for taking off some part of the Act of Parliament concerning the poor miserable seamen's paying 6d. the month out of their wages. All humbly represented by a faithful subject of His Majesty, and servant to the Parliament and nation. Sm. 4to, 1 l., 43 pp., wrapper. £2 10 0 London 1699

321 NAVY. [HOWE (Richard, Earl)] SIGNAL-BOOK FOR THE SHIPS OF WAR. Sm. 4to, 2 ll., 79 pp., original boards, printed paper label on front cover, back slightly defective. £9 10 0 [1793]

* Corbett 114. Not in the British Museum.

The present volume is an official naval signal book: the bulk of the volume is printed, but with numerous spaces for manuscript additions, which have been added, in this copy, in a fine legible copperplate hand, the flags being drawn and coloured with great care. At the end is a manuscript date [17]90; but as the book agrees in size and number of pages with an edition which Mr. Corbett assigns to 1793, we have assumed the present volume to be of that issue.

322 NAVY. ROOK (George K., Admiral of the Fleet, 1650-1709) THE LIFE AND GLORIOUS ACTIONS OF THE RT. HON. SIR GEORGE ROOK. 16mo, original panelled calf. £1 10 0

* Supported the Revolution of 1688; took part in the Battle of Beachy Head, 1692; Lord Commissioner of Admiralty, 1694; Privy Councillor, Commander in Chief of the Grand Fleet, 1703. Captured Gibraltar. (See D.N.B.)

323 NAVY. THE SENTENCE PRONOUNC'D BY THE COURT-MARTIAL. . . the 3rd of June, 1746, on Vice-Admiral Lestock. 8vo (7 $\frac{1}{16}$ by 4 $\frac{5}{8}$ in.), wrapper. £1 12 6 For M. Cooper: London 1746

* Brit. Mus. Cat. "L." Vol. 32, p. 217. Dict. of Nat. Biog., Thin Paper, Vol. II., p. 993. This court-martial arose out of a quarrel between Admiral Mathews and Vice-Admiral Lestock. In the action fought off Toulon Lestock interpreted Mathew's signals absolutely literally and not with an eye to the tactical situation. After the battle Mathews sent him home, where he was courtmartialled and acquitted on technicalities. There is no doubt that Lestock placed his private quarrel before the national honour, and that the finding was a miscarriage of justice.

At the beginning of part one is a plate which enumerates 101 varieties of the Gothic "M." Then follows a list of the types peculiar to each town and printer, with the measurement and other characteristics, such as initial letters, etc., and references to facsimiles; and an index classified by the "M" and arranged by the type measurement; thus enabling one to identify any Gothic type in a few moments; anyone who has spent hours in wading through the Gesellschaft für Typenkunde, Burger's Monumenta, and other "monuments" of a similar nature will appreciate this conspectus.

 Thomason, I. 65.

A very curious tract on a Society of Roman Catholic women confessors. Parliament had issued a proclamation banishing all Jesuits, priests and friars, with a penalty of death (in accordance with the Elizabethan anti-Roman Catholic law) for all those who failed to comply within a certain period. At the time that this tract was written, one of the defaulters had already been executed, and eight others were in Newgate. Priests were naturally becoming scarce as a result of these measures, and "some certain women belonging to the popish crew . . . impudently resolved" to act as confessors, alleging that they had been "ordained by Father Ciprian . . . Unto whom did daily many assemble themselves, not onely for absolution, but distraction." As the lady-confessors were, with one exception, "young and handsome," the author suggests that so far as their male clientèle was concerned, their exercises were not of an exclusively religious nature.

For the Roxburghe Club: London 1904

 Edition limited to 100 copies.

"If we turn to take stock of the treatise as Bercher gives it us, we find it makes extraordinarily interesting reading, both as a record of the intellectual amusements of the later Renaissance and for its contents in themselves. The sacrifice of smoothness and of form involved in the compression of Domenichi's verbose work is more than counterbalanced by the gain in closeness and intensity. In Bercher's dialogue we have not only (Chaucer, other verse, and Clapam's translation apart) the earliest English representative of a discussion that had occupied some of the best brains of Europe, but we have practically a summary, with some additions, of what those brains had contributed. Crowded here, all together, are the best results of all that had been written on the question up to that date—pemmican of what history and philosophy and science had as yet said on this subject. A specially interesting feature lies in the details Bercher furnishes about accomplished women in England during the reigns of Edward and Mary, with several of whom he may have had some personal acquaintance." Robert Granjon: Lyons 1556

 Hoffmann III. 37. Baudrier II. 59.

This book, in common with most others printed in this peculiar type, was designed to teach children to read and write. The poems at the end include: Prière de Jonas, le prophète, estant au ventre de la baleine (f. 52b) Congratulation à Joachim du Bellay, poète François, sur ce discours et sa lyre chrestienne. (f. 55) etc. There are two copies of this book in the Solar catalogue (No. 1213 and No. 2007), one in quarto and the other in octavo, with some variations in the title. Baudrier doubts the existence of two separate editions in the same year.

The earliest known example of the type called lettres de civilité, was cut by Nicolas Granjon at Lyons in 1556. The first book printed in it was La civilité puérile et honnête (Lyons 1556) (to which circumstance the type owes its name). Faulmann, Illustrierte Gesch. d. Buchdruckerkunst, p. 286, gives a facsimile of this type which differs materially from the present example.

442 Preces-Latinae dedicated to PHILIP III. OF SPAIN by F. DIEGO DE BARREDA. ($3\frac{3}{4}$ by $2\frac{3}{4}$ in.). The text is of Gothic letters cut out of paper with the utmost care and delicacy, and shown in colours by the insertion of red, green, yellow, blue, black and orange silks between EVERY TWO LEAVES. The book consists of 44 double leaves, the first of which bears the royal arms of Spain, shown up with red silk. Bound in the original calf over wooden boards, sides elaborately tooled in gold, g.e. £75 0 0 [c. 1600]

 The patience and skill which must have been exercised to produce such a marvellous piece of work as this is almost inconceivable. The workmanship is of the highest order; the arms of Spain being correct in every detail, and cut with an extraordinary degree of fineness and accuracy. This fine work does not vary, for every letter of the text is executed with the same exactness, rendering the book a superb specimen of a class of work, which, at this early period, is seldom, if ever, met with.

443 [Vera (Don Juan de).] CENTON EPISTOLARIO del Bachiller Fernan Gomez de cibda Real, Fisico del mui poderoso e sublimado Rei Don Juan el segundo deste nombre. Fue estampado, e corretto por el protocolo del mesmo Bachiller Fernanperez por Juan de Rei easu costa enla cibda de Burgos el Anno MCDXCIX. Sm. 4to, Gothic letter, vellum. £6 10 0 [About 1630]

 Recognized by all bibliographical authorities as a forgery. Ticknor (Span-Lit. III., pp. 486, et seq.) endeavours to prove that it is also a literary forgery. If Ticknor is correct, the book has a very curious history. A Spanish gentleman, named Don Juan de Vera, was, though of good family, dissatisfied with his ancestors; he, therefore, wrote, or caused to be written, about eight works, all incidentally tending to the aggrandisement of the De Veras, who suddenly discovered that they were related to half the crowned heads of Europe. These books were published in different towns, such as Salamanca, Milan, Arras, and even Lima. So far the story is a matter of certainty. Now Ticknor believes that this book is one of the same family, for the following reasons: (1) Fernan Gomez, though a court functionary, appears to be unknown to his supposed contemporaries. (2) The letters follow contemporary chronicles so closely that, though undated, they can have the dates assigned from the chronicles. (3) The language is often over archaic, and "Gomez" uses a word for which no other authority is known (ca=que). (4) The editor, though half a century later, uses exactly the same archaisms. (5) Eleven of the letters contain statements about Vera's family in the reign of John II. It is impossible to resist the conviction that De Vera, warming to his work, attempted a double forgery, literary and bibliographical. For a full statement of the case, see Ticknor.

John Darby: London 1721

 Lowndes 1272. The "British Merchant" was originally published as a periodical in 1713, at the time of the proposed treaty of commerce with France. Its object was to refute the reciprocity arguments propounded by Defoe in favour of the treaty in his 'Mercator.' It more than neutralized the influence of Defoe's paper, and finally secured a majority of nine against the eighth and ninth articles of the treaty. (See D.N.B.) Having achieved its object, it was discontinued; but the most important articles were collected and published in book form in 1721, of which edition the above is a copy.

Tho. Dring and Sam. Crouch: London 1680

 McCulloch, in the preface to "Early Tracts on Commerce," published by the Political Economy Club, observes: "This work bears in various respects a strong resemblance to that of Roger Coke, but is shorter, and written in a less affected manner. . . . The reasonings and statements by which the author endeavours to show how the results, which he deplures, had been brought about, and how they might best be obviated, exhibit a curious mixture of truth and error, intelligence and prejudice." The preface is signed "Philanglus," the authorship having been attributed to Petyt by George Chalmers.

Biog. gives no account either of James Ashley or Henry Simons, but we gather, in a hasty glance through the book, that Simons was suspected of having committed perjury in the case of a Joseph Goddard, and a warrant was issued against him in London. Ashley arrested and detained him in Essex on this warrant, where, of course, it had no force. Simons therefore sued him and got £200 damages on a technical point.

Calendar. Dict. Nat. Biog., Thin Paper Ed., Vol. IV., pp. 1139-1140. The circumstances, as given by the D.N.B., are briefly these: William Corder, the murderer, was the father of an illegitimate child by Maria Marten; in order that they might be married Corder arranged that she should leave her home on May 18th, 1827, dressed in male attire, and join him at a place known as the Red Barn, whence they would proceed to Ipswich and be married. Maria left her home and was never seen again. At first no suspicion was aroused, as Corder kept the girl's parents informed as to her supposed movements. The body was found in April, 1828, being searched for at the instigation of the girl's mother, who repeatedly dreamed that her daughter lay buried at Red Barn. Corder was at once arrested and brought to trial in August, and was hanged on the eleventh of that month.

Jöcher, British Museum, Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, Simon, and Struve. The book is, as the title implies, a poetical account of the intemperate habits of the time and country. In the dedication the author inveighs against the custom of men and women drinking together, which, he says, is productive of all kinds of immorality. As this tract, in addition to its rarity, is extremely interesting, we give a full bibliographical description of it below:—
